

APPENDIX TWO

I have set out in this appendix a long series of possible verse or passages that you might wish to print off onto card and then cut up and use for Scripture memory. I have organized them into different broad categories. So, some will be useful for evangelism and will help you to reply appropriately when people ask questions or raise arguments about the gospel. Others are of more general application and have to do with various aspects of our lives as disciples.

The final section is intended to be used when you are praying so that you can confess, declare and proclaim God's Word out loud. That will help you enormously because that is how we claim, or appropriate, the truth of God's Word for ourselves. Then we see His promises and statements become a practical reality in our own lives. That is what confession is all about. It means for you to say the same as God says about any given issue.

It is by saying the same as God says, i.e. by declaring and proclaiming, that God's Word becomes real to us. We are also letting God, the angels, the demons, ourselves and anybody else who is listening, know what we believe and where we stand. It is so important to say out loud what we believe and which of God's promises we are relying on at a particular time. At times of difficulty such declarations need to be made with some boldness and even aggression.

There are times when all the evidence, and all of our circumstances, suggest that our position is hopeless and that we should give up. It is precisely at such times that we most need to cling on to God's promises and assert them, and our faith in Him to keep them. By so doing we can alter the whole spiritual climate surrounding us and see dramatic changes occur in our circumstances.

But even if no change comes, or if it does not come immediately, we still need to maintain our positive, confident confession. If nothing else, we need to let the demons know where we stand and that we will not abandon our hope or our confidence in God and His Word. Please see other books, later in this series, for a much fuller discussion of how confession/proclamation/declaration work and how to go about it in practice.

For those who are reading this in the hard copy of the book, the cards can be obtained by going to the online version of the book. That can be found on our website and is free to download. The website is www.realchristianity.com
